

Motion on Ukraine in Scottish Parliament - Calm Heads Should Prevail over Ukraine

Written by John Hallam

Sunday, 09 March 2014 19:44 - Last Updated Sunday, 08 February 2015 22:19

God bless Bill Kidd MSP for doing this.

Failed so far to get motions in the UK or Australian parliament.

No idea how many if any, tactical nukes Russia may or may not have in SW Russia or Crimea. It may have some SLBMs in Sevastopol.

But Bill's point is well taken. Care is needed and calm heads should prevail.

Motion Number: S4M-09277

Lodged By: Bill Kidd

Date Lodged: 07/03/2014

Title: Calm Heads Should Prevail over Ukraine

Motion Text:

That the Parliament looks for calm heads to prevail in the present turmoil threatening to engulf Ukraine in international schism; understands that there are Russian nuclear submarines and associated missiles and warheads sited in Crimea and over 1,000 Russian tactical nuclear weapons in the area and that the US has 400 tactical nuclear weapons stationed in five countries across Europe allied with the French nuclear arsenal and that of the UK situated entirely at Faslane on the River Clyde; believes that brinkmanship and partisan political posturing have no place in the search for a peaceful and viable resolution of the present social disorder afflicting Ukrainian civil society, and understands that the possible alternative, however unlikely, of a limited nuclear exchange would, according to research quoted by the International Red Cross at the conference of concerned nations in Mexico in February 2014, result in a body count of hundreds of millions and over a decade of the coldest conditions since the last ice age.
